Four Encounters is an unfinished work by the writer and philosopher Olaf Stapledon, written in the late 1940s but only published 26 years after the author's death. It takes place in contemporary (post World War II) Britain, and describes four meetings with various characters who are named for the spiritual quality that best defines them: a Christian, a scientist, a mystic and a revolutionary. There were originally to have been ten encounters, but Stapledon died before the project was completed.

Authors : Stapledon, Olaf : SFE : Science Fiction Encyclopedia

Stapledon began publishing essays as early as 1908, found an admirable vehicle in the imaginary conversations of Four Encounters (coll 1976), probably written in the later 1940s. Stapledon was writing in an ancient tradition of European speculative fiction. He called his stories "fantastic fiction of a semi-philosophical kind". He was at least initially unaware of Genre SF and was
