Non-metals have different forms of degradation from metals and, in order to protect them, the causes of degradation should be considered. Wood is a natural polymer so it is exposed to UV degradation and also by other environmental factors such as temperature, moisture, wind and sand.

Material Degradation - Mechanical Engineering
Polymer is a synthetic or natural material consisting of molecules stringing together to form a long chain. The properties of a given polymer depends on the basic molecules (a "mer" unit, repeating unit) making up the polymer, the length of the chain, and the arrangement of the polymeric chains.

Corrosion, Degradation and Oxidation - LPD Lab Services

Corrosion, oxidation and degradation commonly spoil the aesthetics, leads to component weakening, the requirement for remedial actions and, in the worse case, failure of materials in products.
