The Star Shard, by Frederick Durbin, is a winning young YA fantasy with an intriguing setting, albeit a bit implausible. The main character, Cymbriel, is a young orphan girl-slave who lives on the Thunder Rake, a mind-bogglingly massive wagon that claws its way on seven-story wheels through the countryside to trade with the world's cities, towns, and villages. It is basically a market town on Frederic S. Durbin's The Star Shard is a fairy tale among fairy tales. The world is full of fantasy and wonder, perfectly fitting for this fairy tale. I was surprised at the amount of detail that went into Durbin's world. He went to the darkest corner and came out with a story about dedication and loyalty.
